Barber Education & AI Experience

Prepared for Don Wismer · ABS 2027

Don, this is a focused next step after our October 15 conversation: one practical class, taught in English or Spanish, with a clear outcome participants can demonstrate.

Carlos “Tulpi” Turpeau · South Carolina-licensed barber instructor · Registered barber · Bilingual educator

The consultation class is my recommended starting point. The other two are separate options, to be chosen to fit your audience and programming.

01 / Recommended first class

Hair-Loss & Scalp Micropigmentation Consultations: A Communication Class

Listen first. Set expectations. Respect the decision.

Barbers, stylists, educators and owners.

- Complete a record: goal, routine, questions, limits and next step.
- Find and rewrite three unsupported promises.
- Explain the agreed next step in 60 seconds.

A five-part consultation record.

This is communication education. It includes no procedures, diagnosis or qualification to perform scalp micropigmentation.

Five criteria, scored 0–2: listening, relevant questions, clear limits, accurate claims and an agreed next step.

The craft matters. So does what we pass on.

Two complementary directions

The consultation class is my recommended starting point. The other two are separate options, to be chosen to fit your audience and programming.

02 / Beyond the Chair: From Barber to Business Leader

Beauty professionals and business owners.

- Separate revenue, variable costs and contribution margin in a fictional example.
- Connect a service description to a specific client need.
- Choose one measurable action for the next 30 days.

Participant leaves with: A cost-and-time card and a two-sentence positioning statement.

Can the participant explain what the calculation includes, what it excludes and which action they will test?

03 / The Bilingual Barber Educator: Craft, Identity & AI

Educators, mentors and working professionals.

- Build a micro-lesson around one observable skill.
- Correct an English/Spanish draft for meaning and unsupported claims.
- Choose when human review is required before sharing content.

Participant leaves with: A micro-lesson and a corrected bilingual example.

Can another person perform or explain the skill, and can the educator justify each correction?

Explore a proposed format

60 minutes: The recommended starting format: demonstration, guided practice, peer feedback and a completed consultation record.

30 minutes: introduction and one short rewrite. 90 minutes: additional communication role-play and feedback.

All formats are proposals. Language, timetable, room, fees, travel, recording and any CE eligibility remain to be agreed with ABS.

A sample of the method

Fictional case: Jordan wants to understand cosmetic hair options. He travels often, values discretion and has questions about maintenance. His suitability for any service has not been established.

Example to challenge

> “Perfect forever. A photo is enough to decide. You will not need ongoing care.”

Compare a more responsible response

“Let’s begin with what you want to understand and the routine that works for you. We can clarify the questions, limits, costs and care information that need to be checked before you decide on a next step.”

Write one question you would ask Jordan before discussing a service.

Choose the audience. Build the first class.

My proposed first step is the 60-minute consultation class. The enclosed session overview and learning outcomes are ready for your team to review. If this direction fits, let’s identify the reviewer, preferred language and review date; we can then agree on the scope and contributor terms.

For the first class: screen, microphone, slides, paper worksheets and time for guided practice. No live model, procedure or paid AI account is needed for the proposed consultation session.

Before delivery, agree the scope, contributor terms, travel, production, revisions, recording and content-use permission. This preview makes no commitment on either side.

Independent proposal prepared by Carlos “Tulpi” Turpeau for discussion with Don Wismer / America’s Beauty Show. No selection, contract, CE approval or institutional endorsement is represented.
